Correctional Research Roundtable

Join the fastest growing online community for corrections professionals @ <http://Community.NICIC.org>

Researchers, the NIC Information Center would like your help!

We are introducing a new forum in our Corrections Community called the Correctional Research Roundtable. It will promote networking among practitioners, academicians, and anyone else interested in correctional research. The Roundtable will be a virtual meeting ground for discussion of topics such as in-progress or newly completed research, research theory and techniques, the practitioner/academic interface, and evidence-based practice. The Roundtable will become an important tool for enhancing communication among researchers with shared interests so please come and join us today.

Who should join?

- ◆ Departments of corrections research staff
- ◆ Statistical analysis centers staff
- ◆ Faculty involved in correctional research
- ◆ Anyone else with an interest in correctional research

How to join?

There is a quick registration form to fill out. Membership is free and open to anyone interested in participating. To get started:

1. Create an account:

What is the Corrections Community?

The National Institute of Corrections has created a unique web site that uses web-based networking tools to create an environment for corrections professionals to interact and work together.

The Community is managed and moderated by NIC and Information Center staff.

What can you find in the Corrections Community?

You will find a thriving community of over 4,000 other corrections professionals that you can tap into. In addition to this new Research Roundtable forum, you can also access other public forums covering a variety of correctional issues.

How can the Corrections Community help you?

You can subscribe to any of the corrections news blogs that NIC uses to publish new information NIC news, new publications, and other corrections information. It's a great way to stay informed and interact with NIC and the Information Center.

What's new in the NIC Library?

You can now subscribe, via RSS, to view the latest publications as they are added to the NIC web site. Look for the orange RSS symbol as you browse the online library!
